Protests against austerity measures

ain Worst riots hit Algiers

ALGIERS, Oct. 7, (Agen-. cies): Police dispersed Muslim fundamentalists who gathered from morning prayers in the Algerian capital today after many people were killed and wounded in two days of protests against. President Chedli Benjedid's austerity measures, witnesses said.

The military yesterday banned all protests and public meetings and a state of emergency was imposed in Algiers and its suhurbs.

The rioting was the worst since Algeria gained independence from France in 1962.

Witnesses who visited the city hospitals today said many people had been killed and scores wounded in clashes with security forces yesterday.

Moved

At least two of the dead were killed last evening in clashes between youthful demonstrators' and troops backed by tanks and armoured cars in the El Biar diplomatic quarter of Algiers, hospital sources said.

The two were identified by their mother Nabila Bouzidi as Riadh Bouzidi, 14, and his hrother Nadim Bouzidi, 23. She told reporters she also saw the corpses of several other demonstrators in the morgue of the Bitraria Hospital. Another

The new military command for Algiers, created yesterday to put an end to serious outbreaks of arson and looting, said earlier that some rioters and security personnel were killed in clashes yesterday and early today.

A communique issued by the official news agency APS said the military command regretted the loss of life on both sides.

It did not give figures but Algiers residents earlier reported many dead and wounded in the clashes and an Algiers hospital told Reuters it had taken in some 50 wounded youngsters since Tuesday evening.

Some unofficial estimates of casualties speak of tens of dead and hundreds of wounded. The military command announced that 900 people had been arrested in the preceding days, saying they were caught "red-handed in pillage and vandalism."

Tension was especially high in the Algerian capital today because it is the Muslim holy day. fundamentalists Islamic opposed to the secular one-party state have been an element in the protests, Algeria-watchers said. The government also has come under criticism from some Army officers for its recent rapproehement with neighbouring Morocco.

Youths tried to gather in a downtown square near Algiers University.

Involved

But hlue-uniformed police in full riot gear brandishing night sticks patrolled the area in vans. The police officers, wearing visored helmets and armed with rifles, jumped out of the vans and pushed and shoved the youths any time they tried to group up. ordering them to disperse.

Many ordinary Muslims not involved in the disturbances left their homes for the first time in days and spent the morning praying in city mosques.

Waite may be released soon

Beirut publications reported today that Anglican church envoy Terry Waite and two other British hostages are to be released very soon.

One of the publications, the weekly magazine Ash Shiraa also said that American hostages would be released before the US presidential election on Nov g.

The daily newspaper Al Anwar, based in the eastern Christian sector of the divided capital, said Waite, who has been missing in Lebanon for more than 20 months, would be released in 72 hours.

Decision

Ash Shiraa, based in West Beirul, said Waite and two other British hostages will be released "very soon."

The magazine said a recent decision for the restoration of full diplomatic relations between Britain and Iran "provided a strong impetus to efforts currently under way for the release of Waite and his countrymen."

The magazine also quoted an unnamed informed security source as saying Monday's release of hostage Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian national and legal resident alien of the United States, marked "the beginning of the release of more American

England call off cricket tour of India

LONDON, Oct 7, (Reuter): England today finally cancelled their cricket tour of India in the wake of the ban on players with South African links.

Deal to break Gulf peace talks stalemate

UNITED NATIONS, Oct 7. (AP): Sources said that Iran has agreed to stop searching neutral shipping in the Gulf for war cargo, and Iraq will agree to post-pone discussion of the Shatt Al Arab waterway in order to unfreeze Gulf war peace talks.

The arrangement would hreak a stalemate that has blocked progress since the talks began on Aug 25 in Geneva, said UN sources and others close to the Iraqi mission, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Secretary-General Javier
Perez de Cuellar proposed the compromise in a series of direct and indirect peace talks with the foreign ministers of Iran and Iraq at the United Nations.

Agreed Under the proposal. Iran would cease stopping neutral vessels in international waters of the Gulf and Strait of Hormuz to seize war cargo, and Iraq agreed it will wait to discuss its rights to use the Shatt Al Arab water until later in the negotiations. Both parties will instead proceed to arrange a withdrawal of their forces to the internationally recognised border, and will discuss the repatriation of prisoners of war, the sources said the sources.

The compromise will not be announced until after the peace talks resume in Geneva later this month because the Iraqis want to wait several weeks to see if Tehran honours the agreement.

The Shatt Al Arah is Iraq's only waterway to the Gulf. Iran has a long Gulf coastline with various ports.

The issue of whether both nations share rights to the water-way under a 1975 treaty or whether Iraq has sovereignty over the enure passage and both its banks will be taken up later in the peace talks, when the parties discuss longstanding issues as part of a peace treaty, said the sources.

Baghdad also had said from s practice of searching ships for fraq-bound war cargo, a right that nations at war are generally recognised to have, violated a UN Security Council resolution calling for the parties to "discontinue all military activities on land, at sea and in the air." Search

Iran had insisted it had the right to search for war cargo. Both nations have abided by a ceasefire since Aug 20. Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, reporting modest progress in peace talks here with Iraq, said yesterday that he was ready to continue the negotiations at the behest of the UN secretary-general. At a news conference, he said: "I cannot go into details, but I can tell you that the situation now is better than (it was at) the beginning."

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz said before leaving for Baghdad on Tuesday that discussions should resume in Geneva. where they began on Aug 25.

Velayati said that although Iraq had said it would be unwilling to hold substantive talks in New York there was substantive discussion "and modest progress has been made."

Raised

Iraq yesterday accused Iran of several violations of the UNsponsored ceaselire. Iruqi Ambassador to the UN Ismat Kattani said Iran had engaged in various engineering operations to fortify strongholds and had raised an Iranian flag near an Iraqi forward position during the period Sept 28-30. The charges were made in a letter to Perez de Cuellar dated Oct 5 and made public yesterday. Iran also accused Iraq of dozens of violations of truce.

Zia supporters form election alliance

ISLAMABAD, Oci 7, (Reuter): Supporters of the late President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq have banded together to fight Benazir Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party in elections next month. An announcement hy leaders of eight mainly right-wing and religious parties last night said the alliance would put up joint candidates on Nov 16. The elections are the first to be contested by political parties, since Zia seized power in 1977.

Influence

The programme of the "Islamic Democratic Alliance" (IDA) included making Islamic laws supreme in Pakistan and full support for the "holy war" of Muslim rebels in neighbouring Afghanistan.

Political analysts said the alliance is dominated by the Pakistan Muslim League headed by federal and provincial ministers appointed by the late military ruler. The other seven parties have little national influence individually, they said.

The alliance was formed at a meeting called by former Sind province Chief Minister Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi, a Bhutto ally who hroke with the 35-year-old People's Party leader two years ago.

In 1970 the People's Party under Benazir's father. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, won 59 per eent of National Assembly seats with only 39 per cent of the popular Pcitical pundits say Zia's death in a plane crash on Aug 17 has made the People's Party a favourite to become at least the higgest party in the assembly.

The party in turn dominates the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, a nine-party anti-Zia alliance.

Three other parties, including the Pakistan Muslim League (Junejo) headed hy former Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo, are also widely reported to be planning an electoral pact.

Air Algiers, the state-run airline, cancelled all flights into and out of Algiers today. Hundreds of travellers were stranded at the city sirport.

In Paris, exiled former Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella in an interview with Le Figaro oewspaper published today said "the Algerian people are hungry for grain, liberty and democracy."

Witnesses said troops shot at the rioters in several areas yesterday and fired tear gas grenades at them as thousands of youths, some with baodguns, looted shops and set ablaze vehicles with foreign license plates.

Gunfire crackled across the capital in the protests against food shortages and price hikes in the socialist Arab nation.

Thursday evening authorities tried to clean up the city centre, towing away hurned out automobiles that protesters had used to build barricades.

Discontent

The violence climaxed several weeks of protests over food shortages caused by the government's economic austerity programme, rocketing prices and the wret-ched, overcrowded housing situation in Algiers where families frequently live 10 or 15 to a room and basic sewage services are lacking.

Although there had been widespread discontent, the protesters do not appear to be organised, have made no specific demands and state-run labour unions have disassociated themselves from the riots.

Long lines of housewives and workers waiting for hread built up at hakeries and stores in the Casbah, the old city of Algiers, today, witnesses said. The disturbances prevented supplies of flour and other vital foodstuffs reaching Algiers from the provinces.

In London, the Foreign Office advised Britons yesterday to consider postponing travelling to Algeria because of civil disturbances there.

A spokesman said the 1,500 Britons already in Algeria seemed to be at little risk, provided they acted sensibly.

Serbian province politburo resigns

BELGRADE, Oct 7, (AP): The worst ethnic and economic unrest in three months has forced the mass resignation of top communist leaders in a Serbian province, boosting Serbia's drive for tighter control of its two provinces.

The 15 members of the Communist Party's Polithuro in Vojvodina province stepped down after tens of thousands of angry, flag-waving protestors virtually laid siege to party headquarters for 30 hours.

Protest The mass protests began in response to the provincial party leadership's decision to discipline two of its members for supporting Serbian Communist Party leader Slohodan Milosevic, the official news agency Tanjug said.

The resignations in Vojvodina were seen as a major victory for Milosevic, who has led the Serhian drive for more control over Vojvodina and a second province, ethnically troubled

Faced with the mounting unrest, national Communist Party chief Stipe Suvar said on Tuesday there would be sweeping changes in the ruling national politburo and policy-setting central committee at or before a central committee meeting scheduled for Oct 17.

Milosevic rejected a call from a former Defence Minister vesterday for unspecified "emergency measures to quell street protests. His political opponents suspect he is using the almost daily mass rallies to gain more national power for himself and Serbia, the largest of the country's six republics.

Tens of thousands of Serbs have rallied almost daily for three months in support of Milosevic's effort to assert more authority in the provinces. Strife

Sino-Soviet summit planned next year

MOSCOW, Oct 7, (AP): President Mikhail Gorhachev will meet with Chinese leaders early next year, and also plans to visit North Korea in keeping with his new job as Soviet head of state, a Kremlin diplomat said.

igor Rogachev, a Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister in charge of contacts with the Chinese, was asked at a news conference yesierday whether a Soviet-Chinese summit would follow a meeting later this year hetween the two countries' foreign ministers.

He was also asked wbether the summit would occur in the first half of next year, as news reports from Shanghai have indicated.

"My sense is that one might be in a position to suggest that both would be the case," Rogachev

Relations have been strained between the two communist giants since the 1960s, and the last Chinese summit was held io 1959 between Nikita Khrusb-

Seoul police teargas anti-Chun protesters

SEOUL, Oct 7, (Reuter): More than 3,000 South Korean student radicals demanding the arrest of former President Chuo Doo Hwan fought pitched street battles with riot police today in the biggest anti-government protest for mooths.

The violent protest marked a clear eod to the relative calm on the country's usually volatile campuses during the Scoul Olympic Games, which ended last Sunday.

Repression

Witnesses at Seoul National University in the south of the capital said police, after coming under a hail of petrol bombs, fired repeated volleys of tear gas to drive the students back through the campus gates.

Earlier leaders from all the capital's militant student unions warned the government that if Chun and his wife were not arrested by Nov 3 they would send thousands of students to seize and "execute" them.

In a statement issued after a campus meeting, the radical leaders said Chun, then the country's military strongman, must bear prime responsibility for the Army's repression of a 1980 popular uprising in which at least 200 died.

On Thursday, a 23-strong student commando burst into the office of one of Chun's closest associates, former Defence Minister Chong Ho-Yong, to dramatise calls for the punishment of those responsible for the Kwangju bloodshed. Police stormed the building and arrested them. in Kwangju itself, about 300 students at Chonnam University battled police today, also demanding Chun's arrest. Yonhap news ageocy said 12 pohocmen were hurt by petrol bombs.

PLO urged to delay political initiative

CAIRO, Oct 7, (Reuter): Egypt bas urged Palestinian leaders to delay deciding their next political moves until after next month's Israeli and US elections, a government minister was quoted as saying today.

The aim was "to avoid giving either candidate for the US presidency the chance to bid for Jewish votes by making pledges it would be hard for the new administration to ignore," Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Boutros Gbali said.
"A premature Palestinian decision on the next steps could also reinforce the Israeli extremist wing," he added.

Kuwait keeping up with latest advances, KISR official says

NEW DELHL Oct 7. (KUNA): Kuwait, through the effective and balanced political system. has taken a number of measures to use developed technological know-how and scientific advances to realise socio-economic development plans, according to Dr Ynusuf Al Sultan, assistant director-general of the Kuwait Institute for Scientific Research (KISR). -

Dr Yousuf presented a paper on the subject at the two-day First Inter-Governmental Consultative Conference on new and high technologies of non-aligned and developing countries, which began here on Wednesday night. A four-member Kuwaiti delegation participated in the conference, inaugurated hy Indian Minister of Science and Technology K.R. Narayanan. Dr Yousuf said the lack of qualified scientific and technical manpower has hindered technological self-reliance to some extent. This is reflected by a limited industrial base capable of producing new and high technologies. However, long-term planning as perceived by decision-makers has helped to gear up research and development activities. impose

The Kuwaiti representative said progress in science and scientific research is used as a tool to achieve socio-economic and political objectives. The development of technology is used as a tool to impose economic and political dominance of the owners of technical knowhow, he said.

Developing countries should benefit from scientific progress in the industrialized world, he said.

Dr Yousuf said that developing countries should work together to acquire technology from the North on equitable

However, he added that North-South technology transfer may not occur if the receiver country imposes restrictions. The user countries of the modern technology will be able to establish a solid socio-economic base and physical infrastructure. They could also consolidate human resources and build sound technologies and research and development institutions, he

Dr Yousuf told KUNA that the developing countries should also pool their resources through joint research activities.

He also said there is a need for exchange of information among the developing nations in science and technology. This would belp to make "us less dependent on industrially advanced nations,"

Absorb

Dr Yousuf said the pobcymakers of these nations should formulate necessary aod appropriate science policies to help them keep pace with technological know-bow.

Dr Saleh Abdul Rehman Al
Athel, president of the King Abdul Aziz City for Science and Technology, said the developing nations should increase their capability to absorb the transferred technologies. He also said the Northern nations should give adequate attention to development of human resources. Barring India and few other developing countries, most of the countries lack skilled and technical manpower. he noted.

Dr Saleh said technologies in most of the areas are largely controlled by advanced nations and our aid must be through cooperative endeavours to improve access to such technologies." he concluded.

Discussing steps taken by Kuwait to keep pace with inter-national technological and scientific advances. Dr Yousuf said the Gulf country developed research and development activities. KISR proposes new projects aimed at introducing new technology.

Some of these efforts have accelerated socio-economic plans, he said. KISR has already started several research programmes in the industrial sector and on preserving natural resources and the environment, the official indicated.

The institute received independent public institute status through an Amiri decree ir 1981. Because of the importance of the manpower development and its effective role in the social development, the Kuwait gov-ernment has offered many incentives to Kuwaiti citizens encouraging them to engage in scientific research. The government organised seven research programmes through KISR. Most of the work will be inter-disciplinary and involve a large number of the institute's departments and divisions. The research programmes include development of food resources, water resources, the petroleum and petrochemical sector, the environment, industrial production, monitoring, assessment and development of technological advances and economic programmes. Dr

Yousuf said.

Co-operation The conference identified five areas for co-operation among the developing nations. The areas are hiotechnology, is microelectronic and computer software, telecommunication and informatics, renewable sources of energy and new energy technologies and advanced materials. The task force created by the conference recommended setting up a centre for science and technology in the Indian capital. which should serve as the focal point for the follow-up of activities and recommendations of the conference. The task force urged the Indian government to expedite the activities related to the establishment of the centre. It suggested preparing a detailed programme of work for the centre. This should address short and long term plans, financing schemes as well as other organisational issues.

A directory of institutions in various countries could he prepared by the centre for the developing countries.

The two-day conference was attended by delegates from more than 30 nations, including Saudi Arabia, Tanzania, Egypt and HARGEISA. Somalia, tReuter): A civil war in northern Samalia has left the government in control of the mountainous arid reginn, but its main towns have been reduced to deserted heaps of rubble.

Diplomats and Somali officials estimate that 50,000 people died in heavy fighting between government forces and rebels of the Somali National Movement (SNM) during June, July and More than 400,000 refugees fled to neighbouring Ethiopia.

The government says 14,000 huildings were razed and a fur-ther 12,000 heavily damaged before the Army regained con-trol of Hargeisa in mid-August. Corpses

A month later I saw rotting corpses still scattered in the rub-hle of this city, which until the civil war was the second largest in Somalia after the capital Mogadishu.

Hargeisa's water supply sys-tem was knocked out in the fighting, food is short and the town's overcrowded hospital is packed with children whose hands or feet were blown off by grenades and anti-personnel mines.

There are also many cases of severe malnutrition.

Control

"Many of these people have been misled by the SNM into believing that government troops would kill them if they came home and accordingly they have hidden in the bush for a long time without food or shelter," Dr Abdi Karim Asser, the chiefmedical officer, told Reuters.

The SNM launched a massive attack on Hargeisa on June 1 aod succeeded in occupying most of the town at one stage, but it never captured the military headquar-

Flooding is a perennial problem for Bangladesh

By Peri Batiwala

DHAKA, (Panos): For Bangladesh, flooding is a perennial problem, a fact of life as sure as the sunshine. The country is a huge alluvial plain created by the deposits of billions of tonnes of silt washed from the Himalayan slopes by the subcontinent's two largest rivers, the Ganges and the Brahmaputra.

In an average year it is estimated that about 29,000 square kilometres, or over a fifth of the country is under water; this year two thirds of the country, as well as 80 per ceot of Dhaka, has been submerged under several feet of flood water.

How far is this a major shift from the recurring problems of flooding in a swampy flat country, where at the best of times, most of it is less than 2 metres above sea level? Or is the disasterflooding a symptom of a deteriorating man-made ecological disaster.

Deforestation

Opinion is divided. Firstly, some experts say the problem is being greatly aggravated by extensive defirestation in northern India and Nepal. They lack co-ordinated oational efforts in reafforestation for Bangladesh's worsening problems.

According to The Centre for Science and the Environment in New Delhi, India has lost 40 per cent of forest cover in the last 30 years to meet domestic timber needs. The increase in floodprone areas has almost tripled in the last 25 years, despite an enormous increase in flood control. Similarly, in Nepal there is excessive pressure on fuelwood supplies. Critics argue that this extensive denuding of the Himalayas, by peasants searching for fuelwood or building wood, or by ravenous big business, has robbed the slopes of vegetation cover, which normally acts as a "sponge", preven-ting the full onslaught of flasb

As well as causing landslides, the torrents wash down billions of tonoes of high-quality top soil which silts up river beds, making them shallower and even more liable to flooding. In Bangladesh itself there is extensive deforestation in the Chittagong Hill

Population

Bangladesh's population of 110 million occupies an area of 144,000 sq, km, a sizeable proportion of which is flooded for months at a time, while the population swells hy 3.3 million people annually.

For many experts, any longterm strategy for safeguarding Bangladesh from future floods, must begin with co-ordinated efforts by governments, NGOs and grass-roots organisations to conserve the remaining forest, and then implement reafforestauon programmes.
On the other hand, there are experts who say that the issue of man-made deforestation is being overstated. According to one, Steve Brichieri-Columbi of Halcrow, a British consultancy firm with many years experience in Bangladesh, the real focus should be on planning a longterm river and flood control

Efficiently managed, many argue, such a policy could be the lock-keeper to Bangladesh's

For a country like Bangladesh, interlaced by a network of water agement is not a concept. There are at present two national authorities responsible for policy and implementation - the "Master Planning Organisation" suppor-ted by the World Bank and UNEP, and the Water Board of about 17,000 employees which is systems and canals, water man-responsible for construction. With these structures in place. what is going wrong? Flood control through water storage, an obvious measure, is not available to Bangladesh because there are no suitable sites. The teasible option --- river embankment and polderisation — which is the main thrust of existing government efforts, is hindered because earthembarkments demand a lot of already overpopulated land. and there is little earth with which to huild them. Adding to this, many of the embankment schemes seem to have been built in relative isolation and there is no integrated policy for a countrywide approach. The construction of unplanned embankments for flood control and irrigation, is blamed for localised flooding in the present disaster.

Diversion

Furthermore, the diversion of the courses of rivers like Gumti. Khowai and border rivers, the Muhuri and Feni, is held to be contributing to increased siltation on the river beds, while some experts blame the construction of Farakka barrage, which is diverting Ganges water on a massive scale.

The analytical techniques of hydraulic engineering require a loog term understanding and surveillance of the lay of the land, flood movement, siltation and river control.

But any substantive research in this area is badly lacking. It is hardly surprising that the official approach is a desperate "mend and patch" onc. throwing up new embankments when an old one comes down, and unable to continue regular expensive maintenance. This year, some 380 irrigation projects are thought to be either dead or dying due to silta-tion and no maintenance. Yet another area in which there seems to be a need for real improvement is co-operation between India. Nepal and Bangladesh in river control with a communications network between them so that Bangladesh can know the measures taken further upstream and plan accordingly.

Drains

As the area of the catchment of the Ganges, Brahmaputra and Meghna rivers la total of 1.5 million square kms) which drains into Bangladesh is ten times that of Bangladesh itself, it would seem that real regional co-operatinn is a priority.
The South Asian Association

for Regional Co-operation is moving toward this, but India, which has complete control of the Ganges, tends to control flooding by embankments. Also, India's huge dam projects are built primarily for providing hydropower, therefore for gen-erating income, and secondly for dry season irrigation. Their utilisation in flood management, which could he significant, comes a poor third.

hinese exercising new liberties

By David R. Schweisberg

BELIING, (UPI): In dark alleyways surrounding Beijing's railway station, hundreds of fortune-seekers who left rural villages with nothing but dreams camp out each night on the pavement. Some live on handouts. Others steal to survive. In southern Canton, a flood of arrivals from poor oeighbouring regions has spawned a ragtag corps of professional beggars taking advantage of the city's new prosperity. A hard-core few panhandle by day, then turn to gambling and prostitution by night.

In other cities across China, armies of erstwhile peasants forge a hand-to-mouth existence as day labourers, maids, peddlers Their numbers strain overwhelmed urban services like housing and transport.

All are members of what China has officially dubbed "the floating population," a catch-all phrase for the swelling ranks of transients, from travelling salesmen to penniless vagrants. Freedoms

After decades of being restricted to home villages or assigned lifetime jobs, Chinese are exercising new freedoms to flee impoverished rural backwaters and dead-end employment. The government estimates some 50 million people — one in every 20 - are now on the move. Nearly two-thirds are peasants, freed from communal subsisteoce farming by agricultural reforms that allow those remaining to work more land and make more profit.

Although millions of villagers have turned to small factories they can oow set up, "rural industries" cannot absorb the countryside's vast labour surplus, estimated at more than 100 million. Many flock to cities in search of gold.

At least 10 million have jam-, med China's 23 biggest wban areas, selling their services as carpenters, domestic servants, dressmakers and construction workers to satisfy a booming labour demand loog repressed by a system that claimed no unemployment.

But although it has instilled new labour force vitality, the "floating population" has created a new set of social problems among those who fail or find themselves on the fringe of a society not yet ready to cope with large numbers living on its edges.

The most evident — homeless adults sleeping outside, street urchins begging at restaurants — bark back to unpleasant memories of pre-communist

"These are not homeless people as in the West," asserted Wei Zhiming, a Beijing public security official whose office keeps track of them. "Most doo't wander blindly, but have a purpose: to earn money and return to their families.

"They play a role in invigorating our market. But there are certain problems.

Many transients live with friends, at construction sites or with employers. But others find work scarce or bousing impossible in overcrowded cities, With-out residence permits or a dan-wei, the all-important, work unit, they cannot obtain alloca-tion coupons for cheap lood.

Vagrants Some wind up vagrants, sleep-In Beijing, one young peasant, baffled by city ways, lived in such fear of getting lost or arrested that he dared not leave the train station. Out of money, he ate scraps from nearby restaurants. Others turn to petty larceny and swindling. As many as 50 people are arrested daily at the Beijing rail station for such

"After coming into the cities, some transients find the situation is not as good as they expected and have turned to crime," a Beijing official told the government news agency recently.

Begging, once reputedly eradicated, has again become public and is evolving into a virtual profession. Peasaots moving into richer coastal regions and freewheeling special economic zones can earn a week's average wage in a single day through beg-

The government detained and sent home some 700,000 transients beggars last year. In a recent article in Outlook magazine, Deputy Civil Affairs Minister Zhang Dejiang claimed three-fourths of Chioa's beggars are professionals, panhandling for cash, not food. Begging lo one Human province village, nearly 80 per cent of the residents were reported to have returned with enough money to build new homes.

Along with strains on services like housing, buses and sanita-tion, authorilies accustomed to an Orwellian degree of control over the average citizen's life also are alarmed at their inability to keep tabs on everyone. In Beijing, with a transient population estimated at 1.2 million, authorities launched a citywide survey this summer to try to identify an estimated 400,000 who are without even temporary residence permits and are fully outside the system.

Iran executes political prisoners

By John Hughes

WASHINGTON: Observers of Iran are concerned by a wave of political executions apparently carried out by the Khomeini regime during the past month.

Because access to Iran is denied to many Westerners, details are difficult to establish. But enough evideoce is accumulat-ing some of it derived from Iranian radio broadcasts and official reports in the Iranian press, to suggest that hundreds of political prisoners may have been executed. The fear is that the lives of thousands more may be io jeopardy.

Amnesty International has taken up the case, and two members of the House of Foreign Affairs Committee, Mervyn Dymally (D) of California and Donald Lukens (R) of Ohio, have asked for action from the United Nations. In a letter to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, they urge sending a UN mission to inspect "Iranian prisons and torture chambers," to investigate the reports of executions, and to publicize the prisoners in Tchran's Evin prison have been halted, and this has fuelled speculation that many of the prisoners may have been executed. Pressure

The pressure is on for execution without any kind of trial. For example, in a Friday prayer speech recently, monitored hy Western sources, Iran's chief justice. Ayatollah Musavi Ardebili, said the people are so angry at the dissidents that the "judiciary is under great pressure from public opinion, which questions why we even try them. There is no need for any trial. The crime is clear, the verdict is clear, and the punishment is also clear. There is no need for trial ... the people do not accept it when we say we must have proof, we must have evidence ... the people say they should all be executed.

Amnesty International is opposed to the death penalty. In the case of Iran, it is particularly concerned by the lack of provisions for fair trial in political cases, and the lack of any procedure for prisoners sentenced to death to appeal against conviction or sentence.

Battling against planetary self-immolation: how far will industrial societies go?

By Charles Clover

IT IS an uncomfortable fact that even Guy Fawkes night bonfires make their contribution to global warming.
For the gases which scientists believe may warm the global climate by between 1.5 to 4.5 degrees Centigrade by the year 2050 are produced by every sphere of human activity which involves burning: coal-fired power stations, cars, agriculture, refrigerators and the manufacture of some of the most common household

Western industrial societies are only a short distance along the path towards answering the question, What can we do about the greenhouse effect? This, of course, begs the further question — Will industrial society as we know it be possihle if we are to prevent climate change?

Adapt

Environmental Cassandras, like Jose Lutzenberger, the veteran Brazilian campaigner, have been preaching for 20 years that industrial society as we know it will have to be abandoned. But most government and independent experts believe these environmentalists to be too pessimistic, and their views distorted by rosy idealism or ideology

Society will just have to redesign and adapt to be more nergy efficient and to use fewer fossil finels, says Gerald

Leach, adviser on energy to the International Institute for Environment and Development in London.

"I don't think that we need to de-industrialise society. There are still enormous savings to be made from energy conserva-tion, without doing without your car, your fridge, or your nice warm home."

To halt the greenhouse effect we have to stop producing the four gases responsible for it.
These are chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) — which are also responsible for the dangerous holes" in the stratospheric ozone layer --- carbon dioxide, nitrogen oxide and methane.

Carbon dioxide is responsi-hle for just under 50 per cent of the warming, the rest comes from the raging of other gases. If global production of all these gases remains on course, we can expect a sea level rise of 20 to 140 centimetres by 2050 due to the melting of Polar ice. At 1.5 metres there would be widespread flooding of low-lying land. Potential climate changes could make dust-bowls of the American Midwest and the example, could get better."

Assuming there is global agreement to limit greenhouse gases, how drastic are the changes required? Current thinking has it that a reduction of about 50 per cent can be achieved without drastically altering the ists do no know enough about the heat-huffering abilities of the oceans and the clouds and 'are unlikely to know for 30 years whether we should have reduced the gases by more than

Here is a "shopping list" of immediate measures by which that 50 per cent reduction could be achieved, put together yessenior government scientists. • Stop using CFCs. The best known use of CFCs is in aerosols, hut far greater quantities are used in refrigerators, industrial solvents and packag-

Mrs Thatcher conceded for the first time in her speech that the international protocol on CFCs agreed in Montreal last year—the first ever global anti-pollution agreement — does not go nearly far or fast enough. Some major developing countries, such as China and India, are not party to it.

• Reduce burning of fossil fuels. Carbon dioxide is the biggest problem. Globally about three billion tonnes of it is added to the atmosphere each year, mostly from the burning of fossil fuels. And energy demand is rising. Any political initiative would need to put pressure on those countries subsidising their use of fossil fuels — like China, Australia, and Brazil.

Natural gas looks a more attractive option than coal, because is produces a quarter of the earbon dioxide when it is

tion. Measures last heard of in the oil crisis need to be dusted off. This may necessitate subsidies for factories and houses to become more energy efficient. The 1000 miles-agallon car needs to be developed; current prototypes can do 80 mpg.

• Use more nuclear power. Countries like Sweden and Holland who have decided against nuclear power will be under pressure to reconsider their decision, for nuclear power plants produce no carbon dioxide. And environmentalist groups like Greenpeace will have to examine more carefully their opposition to the nuclear option.

 Develop renewable energy sources. Dams, windmills and udal barrages now look more attractive even though they may have other environmental

• Stop forest burning. The burning of tropical forests produces 20 per cent of the anoual huild-up of carhon dioxide, partly through the gas given off, partly because the trees which are destroyed were acting as a carhon "siok."

Iolernational pressure will have to be brought to coun-teract inertia, greed and corruption. Reforestation will need funding, perhaps through foreign aid. Chancellor Kohl this week promised lavish funds for tropical conotries who stop deforestation.

In the long term, further measures like "treating" carbon dioxide by spraying it to make it ioto carbonic acid (soda water) have yet to be proved to work.

But the higgest and potentially nastiest battles by far says Gerald Leach, will be between the First World and the Third. Third World countries want Western standards of living and for that their use of energy must increase. Liberal intentions of bettering the lot of the Third World poor are, some scientists say, inconsistent with limiting energy use. The First world also "exports" much of its energy demand in having many consumer goods produced in the Third.

All these measures will require an unheard-of degree of international political co-operation and stringent environmental legislation.

Can we win the hattle agains planetary self-immolation? Kenneth Piddington, head of the World Bank's environmental department, says: "In this husiness you've got to be an optimist." Gerald Leach says: "Remember, after the oil crisis the OECD countries reduced their energy use hy ahout 20 per

Weather unravels climate mystery

By Gene Emery

PROVIDENCE, sland. (Reuterl: Scientists from nearly 20 institutions, using evidence from lake and ocean beds, have developed a history of earth's climate dating back 18,000 years.

The findings, as well as soling several mysteries about he weather in ancient times. will help scientists confirm and improve forecasts about the greenhouse effect which is expected to warm the planet dramatically.

By gaining a better under-standing of how the global climate system works, we're contributing to the ability to predict future climate changes", said Thompson Wehb. one of the leaders of the cooperative holocene mapping rojeci (COHMAP).

The group's findings were reported in a recent issue of the ournal 'Scince',

The group found that much of the southwestern United tales was once far wetter than t is today, and that a giant ice heet which covered Eastern Canada up to 9,000 years ago helped delay a heat wave that was later felt throughout much of the rest of the world.

Many of Africa's desert areas were far wetter 9,000 years ago, with fresh water lakes created by strong summer monsoons.

Such weather patterns, Wehh said, explains why skeletons of crocodiles and hipopolamuses have been found n the Sahara desert.

John Kutzhach, director of COHMAP and director of the Centre for Climatic Research at the University of Wisconsin said it was important to reconstruct past weather patterns because climate experts can compare the actual conditions to what computer models say the weather should have been in pre-historic times.

"We know what happened in the past, so we can tell if (the computers) are right," said

Computer models are telling scientists that pollution will cause earth's climate to warm

Some researchers have tried o develop temperature map that are specific to each region, hut "when it comes to the ability to predict regional effects, you have to take such predictions with a grain of salt," said Wehh, a geologist at Brown University

Brazil's biological holocaust

I KNEW I was going to the Amazon at the height of the hurning season, but nothing could have prepared me for the scale of the forest fires.

Brasilia, the capital city, was covered in a smoky haze which had attributed to the heavy. traffic that criss-crosses this oversized Milton Keynes of South America day and night. But as we took off to fly north to Conceicao de Araguaia it became apparent that the haze had quite a different cause.

The savannáh country below us was on fire. From horizon to horizon columns of smoke were rising thousands of feet into the air. Hills were hardly visible. Wherever we landed on our seven-hour flight, grass and small trees were on fire.

Almost 20 per cent of the annual build-up of carbon dioxide — the principal green house gas — can be attributed to the burning of tropical forests. Brazil is one of the main culprits: what is happening there, according to one of the country's leading environmentalists, is 'a biological holocaust'. An eye witness who travelled across the Amazon rain forest this month, describes the scale of devastation.

That next year the ranchers would have to burn even more forest just to replace the pasture that had become barren?

The Indians are learning quickly how to use a language that media people can understand. Apart from protests in Brasilia this is almost the only defence they have against the destruction.

In the meantime the forest fires will continue until the rains start falling in October. Most couptries would fight to save their forests, but Brazilians cannot seem to get rid of theirs fast enough'.

Keith Richards, 44, launching a mature assault on rock 'n' roll

By David Sinclair

AT 49. Neith Richards has proved himself to be indisputably tougher than the rest, and still remains the personification of rock's delinquent tendency.

As perhaps the key ligure in the Rolling Stones he has contributed a pivotal musical legacy and emerged batteredlooking hut unbowed from 26 years of barely imaginable marhem.

Only list month, "(I Can'i Get No) Satisfaction" was voted the best record of the past 25 years in a Rolling Stone magazine critics poll.

The accompanying commentary suggested that the opening guitar riff was "the rock in roll equivalent to Beethoven's Fifth'

"I'm Hattered." Richards says, "but I wonder what Beethoven would have to say about it."

Now, despite initial misgivings, he is about to release his first sole alhum, "I'd always felt that the idea of making a solo album would mean that I'd failed to keep the Stones together, which was something I always figured I could do."

Нарру

However, when Mick Jagger declined to tour to promote the Rolling Stones' 1986 album Dirty Work and then smartly set about recording and promoting his second solo album inslead, Richards was forced to take a rain check on his long-standing policy. In partnership with the session drummer Steve Jordan, whom he met in Paris during the making of Dirty Work, Richards convened a stellar mob of predominantly American musicians, including Fuokadelic bassist Bootsy Collios. Allman Brothers keyboard player Chuck Leavell and James Brown's sax player Maceo Parker. The resulting recording is a grainy, refreshingly soulfoul collection of 11 new songs entitled Talk Is Cheap.

"I'm quite happy with it, especially for a first bash. pronounces Richards, who is again. "As I said to the Stones, 'if you let me out of the cage you'll have a job getting me back in." Indeed, he has a four-piece band from the sessions including Jordan on drums, which he plans to take on a tour of the Americao theetre circuit before Christ-

The relationship between Jagger and Richards, never smooth at the best of times, hit rock bottom in the aftermath of Dirty Work and the frank airing of grievances in interviews, which led some observers to conclude that at long last it really was all over for the Stones. Not so, according to Richards, who states categorically that plans are in hand for an alhum and a tour

"I've seeo Mick quite a lot recently for an evening here and there. Sometimes it's been quite encouraging and other times I fly off the handle. But it has to come out. To me, it's like growing pains more than anything

I think that the Stones can definitely get back together and still do some interesting stuff, because I think they're in a unique position. After all, the audience has grown up along with the music and we've grown up with it, and I don't see any reason why you can't have mature rock 'n' roll. Even if you

Stones shouldn't toss that opportunity away.

By most accounts, Richards has been lucky to arrive at a position where he can telk about investigating the possibilities of "mature rock 'n' roll". His lined face bears testament to the kind of lifestyle which has consigned many of his peers to en early grave.

Cleaned

"You never know whet the job entails until you're too far in to get out. You pay a tax on successes: physically, meotally, and in the way your personality changes. Also, the industrial accident rate in rock 'n' roll is pretty high. It's not e particularly easy joh and there are high risks just on the level of having to take those dodgy charter plenes and driving so many miles, year in year out. Theo there are the inoer problems. A lot of musicians are fragile characters, and yet you are constantly exposed. So you look for something, to dull it or to beef you up. Irving Bank agrees to merge with Bank of New York

NEW YORK, Oct 7, (Reuter): Irving Bank Corp today accepted an improved merger offer from its Manhattan rival Bank of New York Co Inc, writing the final chapter in one of the longest-running takeover sagas on Wall Street.

The takeover, at a price of $1.47 billion, will create a new powerhouse money-centre bank at a time the industry is cutting costs to remain competitive.

An Irving spokesman said its board would vote on Friday on recommendation of Irving chairman Joseph Rice, it will waive a New York state anti-takeover law, strike down its anti-takeover defences and end lawsuits

Rice said he would retire once the merger was completed. No decision has been made on whether to retain the Irving name, a Bank of New York spokesman said.

lrving's energetic campaign to remain independent included rushing into the arms of Italian White Knight Banca Commerciale Italiana, which offered to buy a controlling stake in Irving.

But the Milan-based institution withdrew its offer in August after the US Federal Reserve, Irving's independence effort was dealt a crushing blow on Tuesday when a New York State appeals court upheld a number of earlier rulings, including one that struck down part of Irving's poison pill, or anti-takeover defences.

Proposal

Under the new merger proposal, Bank of New York is offering for each Irving share 1.675 shares of Bank of New York, $15 cash, and a warrant to purchase Bank of New York Stock valued at $5.

Irving said at the present market price of Bank of New-York stock, the deal would have avalue of $78.42 for each share of ... In ing, or a total of about $1,47

Roumi opposes emergency OPEC talks

KPC official sees further oil price drop

KUWAIT. Oct 7, (Agencies): A senior Kuwaiti oil official has predicted world oil prices will continue to fall unless OPEC deals with overproduction and other problems, but he opposed an emergency meeting of the 13-nation group.

Abdullah Al Roumi, executive assistant managing director for sales at the Kuwait Petroleum Corporation (KPC), also called his country's output quota within the Organisation of Petroleum Countries (OPEC) unjust.

"Until now it (Kuwait) bears an unjust production quota that does not correspond to its production in the past, with its giant reserves or with its internal needs," he told the daily Al Anbaa in remarks published

He did not say what he thought Kuwait's quota should be, or if Kuwait would demand an increase at the next OPEC meeting scheduled for Nov 21 in Vienna.

Kuwait now has a quota of 996,000 barrels per day (BPD). but a Reuter survey put its actual September output at an average

 6 million BPD. OPEC production hikes have flooded the world market with oil and sent prices to more than $8 below the group's official benchmark of $18 a barrel, oil analysts say.

Roumi warned of a "tragedy" if winter in the main consuming countries did not spur demand for oil early next year.

The world oil market is now heading for the unknown because of the behaviour of some producing countries inside the outside OPEC," he said. Problems

"A tragedy may occur in the first quarter of next year if the winter in the main consuming countries is not cold," Roumi was quoted as saying.

Asked about unspecified accusations against Kuwait, Roumisaid, "Wemust not forget the great sacrifices Kuwait has made to defend the OPEC price." This was a reference to output cuts Kuwait has made in the past.

"We are against unilateral action, but there are limits to what we can take," Energy Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita said, accusing most other OPEC members of flouting their OPEC-mandated production quotas. He refused to specify what steps were planned.

"Every country has the right to take action to defend its national interests," he insisted, alleging that widespread cheating on the organisation's production-restraint accord had brought the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries to the brink of dissolution.

Indonesia is producing near its quota of 1.1 million barrels a day. The most populous OPEC member, it is dependent on oil and gas revenues for around half of all export earnings.

US business experts predict economy slowing over next 2 years

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct 7, (Reuter): America's business leaders today predicted the econ-omy would slow significantly over the next two years, but not before completing a strong performance this year.

The semi-annual forecast of the Business Council, a group of chief executives of major US companies, is more optimistic than the projections of several private economists but less rosy than the longer-term outlook of the Reagan administration.

The council's report, a consensus view of about 20 corporate economists and chief financial officers, predicts a robust 3.1 per cent expansion of the economy for the year ended in the fourth quarter 1988, similar to the administration's 3.0 per cent forecast.

The Business Council is meeting in Hot Springs, a Shenandoalr mountain resort-The forecast following an even stronger 5.0 per cent gain.

the previous, year, was higher than the group's pevious projection last May, mainly because of stronger than previously estimated growth in business investment and exports.

The net message of the consultants is that we are living in a continual strong economy, Citicorp chairman John Reed. who oversaw the preparation of the report, told reporters.

While none of those surveyed expect a recession in then next nine months, opinions of the direction of the economy for late 1989 and beyond diverge widely, with some predicting a recession, but most expecting a "soft landing" of slower growth.

The consensus was for a slowdown in the growth of US gross national product to 2.5 per cent for the year ended with the fourth quarter of 1989 and a further declaration in the year after that to less than two per cent.

trade deficit and slower growth and springers in new agricultures and business investigation it said.

tment were cited as the main reasons for the slowdown. "It is simply an easing of the overall economic performance," Reed said. The administration has predicted 3.3 per cent growth in per cent of the economists polled each of the next two years but 90 in a recent National Association of Business Economists survey expected a recession either next year or in 1990. Predictions of a slowdown or recession have been rampant since last October's stock market crash, but the economy so far has stubbornly refused to oblige. The economy is nearing its sixth consecutive year of growth.

In the first half of this year it grew at a 3.2 per cent annual rate. The council predicted that consumer spending, a key component of economic growth, would grow at a slower rate than earlier in the decade. But rising export demand and stronger

Japan companies look to dig fortunes out of land shortage

TOKYO, Oct 7, (Reuter): Japan's construction companies are racing to go underground before planned government changes to restrict property rights to certain depths. Under current legislation. property rights extend as high and as deep as land can be used. But the government plans to restrict, these rights so that land below huilding foundation levels would basically be owned in

In the meantime, analysts said major construction companies were boosting research into deep underground construction with an eye on winning the initial battle for what analysts are predicting will be huge contracts.

or new facilities The Japan Civil Engineering Contractors Association has just finished a feasibility study on moving the Yamanote Line, a major railway encircling the capital, down to a depth of 100 metres (330 feet).

The study showed that the move would free an area of some 103,000 square metres (1,109,000 square feet), allowing a stagger-ing 24,000 more families to live in central Tokyo.

An association official said that figure applies even if huildings are constructed on only 30 per cent of the newly created

"Technologically, we are already capable of building such deep subways," the official said.
Underground structures are secure against earthquakes, have stable temperatures and humidity and clean air, said Atsushi Denda, an engineer at the Shimizu Corporation. They are also very quiet.

"Underground areas are not good for living in," he agreed.
"But they can be ideal for traffic systems, storage, factories, and research centres."

World Business Summary

US inflation expected to hold at 4pc, says envoy

UNITED NATIONS, Oct 7, (Reuter): The US inflation rate is expected to remain in the four per cent range and fears about the impact of last October's stock market crash are unjustified, American Ambassador Lester Korn said on Wednesday. Addressing the General Assembly's Economic and Financial Committee, Knrp said inflation in the developed countries would remain low while prices for most commodities had firmed. "In many respects, the US economy is making a major contribution to continued economic growth. We are in the 71st month of the longest peacetime expansion an record with the official forecast calling for real 1988 GNP (gross national product) growth of around 3.5 per cent. "Earlier fears about the impact of last October's stock market decline proved to be unjustified. Despite the harshest US drought in 50 years, we expect US inflation to remain in the four per cent range." Korn said American expansion was being sustnined as the federal budget deficit was reduced. The US has not achieved this positive record alone." he said. "To a large degree, our success has reflected the increased co-operation among the industrialised countries, developing comtries and international institutions, all of which bave a major role to play in the management of the world economy." Korn said the natural environment was critical to development and vital to global well-being. All governments must recognise that human activities and the wastes they produce have a potential to change the planet fundamentally and detrimentally, he said. Global environmental problems demand global co-operation to protect our common oceans and air, our forest and wetlands and the diversity of life that nurtures and sustains our world," Korn said. He said the United States would actively participate in a new UNsponsored inter-governmental panel on climate change. Soviet Ambassador Aleksandr Belonogov said the environment called for immediate action as bumanity and nature had evolved into a dangerous relationship.

US should rely less on imported oil, says Bush

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct 7, (Reuter): Vice-President George Bush said yesterday the United States should produce more oil and natural gas und rely less on energy imports from the Middle East. "The American energy industry is ton important to our national security to have its economic underpinnings totally dependent on the political climate of the Middle East," he told a political rally in this oil-producing state. The Republican presidential nominee said he sympathised with the region, which has been hit by lower oil and gas prices. Bush worked for 18 years in the oil business, running and oil firm in Texas, "I keep an eye on the (oil) prices and this week's dip has been a tough nne," he told the cheering cruwd. Bush said US oil imports were climbing and would reach 10 million barrels per day by 1995, 60 per cent of consumption. "That is not an acceptable energy policy for the United States and I intend to change it," he said. He called for elimination of restrictions on fluctuations in natural gas prices and incentives to produce methanol, a by-product of wood that when used in cars produces less pollution than petrol. He said there should be tax incentives, primarily aimed at small, independeat drillers, to reduce the cost of oil and gas exploration and

London Stock Market Report

U.K. SHARES STEADY BUT OFF HIGHS IN LATE AFTERNOON LONDON, OCT 7, REUTER - SHARES WERE STEADY NEAR THURSDAT'S CLOSING LEVELS. PRICES FELL FROM DAY'S PEAKS AS WALL STREET FALTERED AFTER A NIGHER OPENING ON NEWS OF A SMALLER THAN EXPECTED U.S. SEPTEMBEN JOBS RISE, DEALERS SAID.

LASHO FEATURED WITH A TURNOVER OF 110 NLH SHARES BT 1429 GMT, FOLLOWING NEWS RTZ PLACED ITS 28 PCT STAKE IN LASHO WITH INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS. RTZ SAID THE STAKE WAS SOLD FOR 259 MLN STG, YIELDING A PROFIT OF 113 MLN STG. LASHO SHARES WERE DOWN 30P TO 521 AFTER THE STAKE SALE.

THE FTSE 100 SHARE INDEX AT 1434 GNT WAS UP 0.6 POINTS TO 1,839.4, AFTER A NIGH ON THE DAT OF 1,845.7 AT 1349 GHT. DEALERS SAID THE FALL IN LASMO'S SHARE PRICE REFLECTED THE PLACING OF LARGE BLOCKS OF THE NTZ STAKE AT 500P AND 505P PER

SHARE. RTZ'S ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION PREVENTED IT FROM SELLING NORE THAN FIVE PCT OF LASHO TO A SINGLE BUYER. BUT DEALERS AND ANALYSTS SAY LASHO REMAINS A POSTIBLE DID TARGET, WITH BRITISH GAS SEEN AS THE MOST LIKELY PREDAICR

FOLLOWING ITS MIO-SEPTEMBER DALM RAIO. THE BRITISH GAS RAID, UNICH NETTED 1.14 PCT OF LASMO, WAS LARGELY THWARTED BY LASHO'S SOARING SHARE PRICE BUT MANY STILL EXPECT BRITISH GAS TO RETURN WITH A FULL BIO. ENTERPRISE DIL, AROUND 25 PCT CAMED BY LASHO, WAS DOWN 16P TO 618.

London Gold

LONDON, OCT 7, REUTER - GOLD BULLION PRICES HELD WELL ABOVE 400 DLRS AN OUNCE IN QUIET AFTERNOON TRADING, UNDERPINNED BY THE CONTINUED RECOVERY IN CRUDE OIL PRICES AND CONSTRUCTIVE CHARTS, GOLD WAS FIXED IN THE AFTERNOON AT 403.90 DLRS AM OUNCE, DOWN FROM THE MORNING FIX OF 404.25 BUT ABOVE THE PREVIOUS CLOSE OF 403.00/403.25.

DEALERS SAID PRICES WERE STRUGGLING TO ADVANCE FURTHER, BUT SENTIMENT WAS NORE POSITIVE AFTER TESTERDAT'S RALLT TOOK PRICES ABOVE 400 OLRS FOR THE FIRST TIME IN TWO WEEKS. "THE MARKET IS WELL SUPPORTED AT 403.00 DLRS", OME SAID.

London Money Market

LONDON, DCT 7, REUTER - MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES ENDED AS MUCH AS 1/8 POINT LOWER BUT TRADERS SAID THERE HAD SEEN LITTLE INCREASE IN VOLUME FROM THE MORNING AND THE MARKET REMAINED ESSENTIALLY DIRECTIONLESS.

MENS THAT U.S. NON-FARM PAYROLLS ROSE BY A LONER THAN EXPECTED 255,000 IN SEPTEMBER AGAINST EXPECTATIONS OF A GAIN OF 290,000 MURT THE DOLLAR AND THIS ADED STERLING.

IN LATER TRADING, THE POUND, WHICH HAD EARLIER BEEN LARGELY

SIDELINED, WAS BELOW ITS EARLIER NIGHS AND STOOD JUST 0.1 NIGHER IN TRADE-WEIGHTED TERMS AT 75.9 AFTER TOUCHING 76.1 EARLIER. THE KEY THREE MONTH INTERBANK RATE WAS 1/16 SOFTER AT 12 11-7/8 PCT.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, Oct 7, (Reuter): Wall Street stocks continued higher and held much of their early gains. The blue chips gave some ground to profit-takers when early buying let up, said S.G. Warburg senior trader Ken Ducey. But he said the set back was small and he expected another rally attempt later. Analysis agreed that stocks rose with bonds on a smaller than expected gain in September jobs, the first significant economic data for the month. They said it showed economic expansion was not overheating. The Dow was ahead 10 at 2118 and gaining issues led decliners by two-to-one. The Dow earlier hit a high of 2124. Trading was moderately active.

GATT told to set up dispute panel on anti-dumping duties GENEVA, Oct 7, (Reuter): Japan asked the GATT trade body on Thursday to set up a dispute settlement panel to rule on the legality of anti-dumping duties levied by the European Economic Community (EEC) on GATT secretariat. Tokyo charged the EEC duties broke GATT rules, and asked the ruling council to establish a dispute panel at its next meeting on October 19-The community last April tions covering imported electronic typewriters, scales. excavators, photocopiers and bullbearings. "Dumping" is the practice of selling imports at prices below those charged by the producer in his domestic market. Neither EEC nor Japanese trade delegates in Geneva were available to comment on the latest twist in the bitter row. On Tuesday, Tokyo's delegation here asked the GATT's antidumping committee to conciliate between Japan and the EEC at its next meeting, set for October 27.

Dollar holds steady on US jobs data

LONDON, Oct 7, (Reuter): The dollar recovered in Europe today after dipping slightly on news that the number of Americans out of work fell last mooth.

Wall Street shares were higher at midday with analysts saying the September employment data showed the US economy was not overheating. The figures showed employers hired fewer new workers than currency markets had expected.

Stocks markets in Zuricb and Frankfurt reached 1988 highs. Gold remained steady while oil was slightly up in thin Irade. Steady

On European currency markets, the dollar held steady with some dealers predicting a gradual drift down in the run-up to the release of US trade data next Thursday. It closed in London today at 1.8611 West German marks and 133.25 Japanese yen compared with 1.8640 and 133.50 on Thursday.

By noon in New York, the Dow Jones industrial average was 24.01 points up at 2131.76 in moderate trading. Gold bullion was fixed at $403.90 an ounce in London this afternoon, down slightly from the morning price fix of 404.25. Dealers said prices were struggling to advance further after Thursday's rally took bullion above $400 an ounce for the first time in two weeks.

A Gulf Co-operation Council meeting set for October 16 will bring together six Gulf OPEC members and will be followed by a joint meeting of OPEC's fivemember price panel and sixmember long term strategy com-

In Europe, prices edged up slightly on technical huying ahead of the weekend, but prices eased back in late afternoon.

Towards the European close, North Sea Brent blend, the most widely traded crude on international markets, was quoted around $11.35 a barrel for prompt delivery, up five cents from Thursday.

The leading US grade, West Texas Intermediate (WTI) was up 15 cents at $12.75 and the key mideast crude. Dubai, held unchanged at $9.25.

In London sbares were steady near Thursday's closing levels. Prices fell from day's peaks as Wall Street faltered after a higher opening on news of a smaller than expected US September jobs rise, dealers said.

Lasmo featured with a turnover of 110 million shares by 1429 GMT, following news RTZ

Lasmo with institutional investors. RTZ said the stake was sold for £259 million, yielding a profit of £113 million. Lasmo shares were down 30p to 521 after the stake sale.

The FTSE 100 share index at 1434 GMT was up 0.6 points to 1,839.4, after a high on the day of 1,845.7 at 1349 GMT.

. Fall Dealers said the fall in Lasmo's share price reflected the placing of large blocks of the RTZ stake at 500p and 505p per sbare. RTZ's articles of association prevented it from selling more than five per cent of Lasmo to a single buyer. But dealers and analysts say Lasmo remains a possible bid target, with British Gas seen as the most likely predator followingitsmid-September dawn raid.

The British Gas raid, which netted 1.14 per cent of Lasmo, was largely thwarted by Lasmo's soaring share price but many still expect British Gas to return with a full bid. Enterprise Oil, around 25 percent owned by Lasmo, was down 16p to 618.

Analysts said the large, disper-sed stake in Lasmo could now be in the hands of insultutions which would not beadverse to making a speculative gain by selling oo the shares to a bidder at well above the 500p to 505p paid today. One dealer said: "It would be a good time to launch a bid for Lasmo at say 600p per share. If I were an institution which had just bought at 500p I'd accept like a shot.

Last month Lasmo said it would auction its 25 per cent stake in Enterprise. This announcement followed the British Gas dawn raid on Lasmo which some analysts thought might have been aimed at picking up the stake in Enterprise.

Eoglish China Clays, a loog-rumoured potential RTZ bid target, rose strongly today to close 14p higher at 524. Dealers said there was talk RTZ would use cash from its Lasmo stake sale to make a full bid for ECC or Engineer Delta, up 14p to 299.

Hotel and drinks group Grand Metropolitan, which has made a $5.23 billion bid for US food and retailing company Pillsbury, dipped a penny to 451.

Higher Consolidated Gold Fields was a net 24p higher at 1,303 after reaching 1,310 amid speculation that Minorco's 1,306p per share bid might succeed. This speculation follows news that the two companies bad had merger talks as longago as 1986. Minorco was unchanged in London at 1,112 US cents after 1,088.

Reckitt and Colman showed renewed strength, rising 12p to 937, but dealers said this reflected low volume speculative demand squeezing the price higher amid stock shortages.

By the 1600 GMT official close, the FTSE 100 share index had recovered to stand 5.8 points higher at 1,844.7, regaining much of the ground lost during the afternoon as the Dow Jones industrial average rallied to stand 22 points up at around the same time.

Among the leaders, Commercial Union was up 8p to 349, Cable and Wireless put on 12p to 405 and ICI 3p to 1,037 but Giaxo eased a permy to 1,104 and Wellcome dipped 2p to 519.

Maghreb pipeline could ease Europe's reliance on Soviet gas

RABAT, Oct 7. (Reuter): King Hassan of Morocco says a planned multi-million dollar gas pipelioe from Algeria to Spain across Morocco will ease Europe's energy reliance on the Soviet Union.

He also forecasts the project. the first fruit of an Algerian-Moroccan rapprochement four mooths ago after a 12-year-old rift over the western Sahara conflict, would give Algeria more clout io Europe.

The European Economic Community's Commissioner for Mediterranean Affairs, Claude Cheysson, has described the project, which was approved in Rabat in September, as profitable venture with no financing problems.

No costs were announced for the pipeline, which will be built by a joint Algerian-Moroccan firm. It will be fed by Algeria's Hassi R'Mel fields which now supply fuel through the 2,500-km (1.550-mile) transmed pipeline across Tunisia and under the Mediterranean to Sicily.

Largest The Natural Gas Fields, 400 km (250 miles) south of Algiers, are regarded as among the largest in the world, with estimated reserves of 2,300,000 million cubic metres (80,500,000 million cubic fect) of natural gas.

Although King Hassan has spoken about the benefits of the project, it may have suffered a political setback when Moroccan troops and Algerian-backed Polisario guerrillas in the Sahara clashed on the day the accord for the pipeline was staned.

This wasn't a good start to economic co-operation." a diplomat said in a reference to the September 16 battle in which 270 people were killed or wounded on both sides.

There are no indications yet that the fighting could prompt Algeria and Morocco, which were brought together hy comomic necessities, to ahandon the project. But neither government has given details of when the hecome pipeline will operational.

King Hassan, who spoke strongly on behalf of the pipeline a few days before the accord on it was reached, said it could feed into a European gas grid. Status

"If we could deliver gas to Spain, Algeria would gain a special status in Europe which in turn would win some independence from the Soviet Union for gas supplies," he told senior Algerian journalists. It would enable Europe to breath a little more." he added.

The Soviet Union last year sold about 40 hillion cubic metres (141.2 billion cubic feet) of natural gas to West Germany. ltaly, France, Austria and Finland, 6.4 per cent more than in the previous year, figures from Western sources show.

To offset falls in oil export revenues, the Soviet Union plans to increase natural gas output to 850 hillion cubic metres (30,000) billion enbic feet) by 1990 from

OPEC likely to raise quota ceiling

NEW YORK, Oct 7, (Reuler); OPEC members, facing rising output and a free-fall in of prices, may bave to consider the unusual step of raising assigned quotas in order to bring down actual production, according to US oil industry analysts.

OPEC may have to take this ordinarily price-depressing step in order to re-establish its credibility and stop the year-long decline in oil prices that has accelerated of late.

In January the US benchmark crude was trading at $18a barrel, which remaios OPEC's supposed target. On Tuesday the November crude oil futures contract dropped as low as $12.28 a barrel, the lowest level since prices dipped below the 10-dollar mark in 1986. "OPEC is at a critical junc-

Over-production may in fact be a strategic attempt by some Gulf members to gain leverage so they can be granted higher quotas at the oext OPEC ministerial meeting on November 21, industry experts said. Analysts suggested OPEC might re-establish some control over oil prices by creating a new quota system to include Iraq, and also raise quotas for certainmembers. By raising quotas nearer to the levels members are actually pum-. ping, the organisation may be able to convince some over-with a new system, a reapportionment of quotas, leading to a higher production ceiling, if they are to stabilise the market," Abu Khadra said...

"Ultimately, OPEC will have to increase their (overall) ceiling to bring production down," said Vahan Zanoyan, senior director of the Petroleum Finance Co Ltd. "Current quotas are too low and actual production is too high, which should lead to some new level in the middle."

According to a recent Reuter survey, OPEC's total production in September, excluding Iraq and the neutral zone, was 17.5 million barrels per day, well above its 15.06-million official ceiling, the survey also showed 10 of OPEC's 13 members were producing above quota.

"OPEC will bave to realign quotas for there to be a positive rally in this market," said Paul Ting, an analyst with Oppenbeimer Inc.

One possible dark spot was a lack of growth in the manufacturing sector. The Labour Department's business survey showed that all the jobs created last month were in service industries, with a particularly large increase in teaching jobs as the school year began. The Labour Department's household survey, which has conducted separately from the business survey and is used to calculate the unemployment rate, showed 148,000 more people had a job last month while the work force sbrank by 107,000 as students gave up their summer jobs and returned to class. As a result, 6.6 million Americans had no job in September out of a labour force of 121.92 million.

The September unemployment rate of 5.4 per cent was down from 5.9 per cent in September 1987.

A different measure of the uremployment rate, which includes military personnel as well as civilians, also fell two-tenths of a point last month, to 5.3 per cent from 5.5 per cent in August.

The stagnation in manufacturing employment, which followed a period of brisk expansion earlier in the year as industries geared up to take advantage of booming export husiness, could foreshadow a slowdown in progress toward cutting the nation's trade deficit, some economists said.

Employment in mining also shrank for the second month in a row, while the number of construction jobs was little changed.

Not only did more Americans have a job last month, they also worked longer hours. The average work week lengthened to 34.7 hours in September from 34.6 in August, the government said.

Industrial economies growing at 4pc: OECD

PARIS, Oct 7, (AP): The impact of exchange rate changes in recent years on correcting external imbalances may disappear soon, and the dollar's rise so far this year may slow the correction of the massive US external deficit, the chief of the OECD said yesterday. in an address to the Council of Europe's Parliamentary Assembly in Strasbourg, Jean-Claude Paye, secretary-general of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, said the growth of economic activity in the Western industrialised democracies in 1988 will be much faster than the OECD originally predicted. A copy of Paye's speech was released in Paris.

Estimates The average grriwth rate of the 24 OECD economies in the first half of this year has been running at around 4 per cent, and it appears "likely to remain at much the same level in the second half of 1988 and could start to fall thereafter. This would be in line with latest estimates by the International Monetary Fund (IMF). predictiog an inflation-adjusted growth rate for the industrialised economies in 1988 of 3.9 percent. OECD projections made public in June indicated a growth rate of 3 per cent in 1988, slowing to 2.5 per cent in 1989. Paye also suggested that the OECD now believes that the rate of inflation will be very slightly higher than previously estimated, rising to a 4 per cent annual rate in the second half of this year from 3.5 per cent in

The OECD's unemployment rate has on average improved somewhat, he said. But the situation varies widely from country to country, ranging from a 2.5 per cent unemployment rate in Japan to France's 10.5 per cent imbalances .

He called the level of unemployment in the OECD area dangerously high."

Turning to the massive external imbalances of the US, Japan and West Germany, Paye said they began to diminish more than a year ago thanks to policies adopted in these countries and to exchange rate adjustments. But, be said, "it is possible that the effects of the changes in exchange rates over the past three years will disappear quite He noted that Japanese and German exporters have been able to adapt to the revaluation of their currencies.

Risk Another risk is that the dollar's rise 'is prompting fears in some quarters that the US external adjustment processes may be slowing down. This makes it even more clearly necessary that domestic demand should grow faster than output in the partner countries of the US and slower than in the US itself." Paye also warned of the external imbalances that are emerging in Europe, saying large deficits can seriously constrain the economic policies of the delicit countries and induce them to curb growth just at a time when they would want to strengthen it...in order to combat unemployment." He suggested that the deficits be financed by encouraging saving rather than by currency realignments. Slowdown Paye warned that the consequences of a slowdown in the correction of big external imbalances could be serious.

"If, for example, the US deficit were to stop declining and stabilise at around $100 billion a year. the slowly restored confidence of economic and financial actors could be seriously shaken," be stated. Furthermore, he warned, the

Salman Rushdie taxes the reader's patience in his latest offering, The Satanic Verses

Satanic imagination

By Bill Buford

SALMAN Rushdie's first novel in five years, The Satanic Verses, begins with a fall, the fall of the novel's two principal characters—cartwheeling, legs wrapped around each other's neck — as they plummet from their Air India jumbo jet, blown apart by terroriats, to the ground below.

While falling, they chal. One of the characters sings. A woman appears, she has lacquered hair and a diamond in her nose and, sitting atop a carpet, she talks about love. Her husband makes ball-bearings; the woman, we learn later, is dead. And then our two heroes splash down into the sea, survive and are washed ashore in Britain.

One of the characters is named Chamcha and he has a famous voice: it is the voice you hear in television advertisements when a frozen pea, a pack of sausages or a gartic-flavoured crisp has to talk.

Chamcha is Indian and, after being washed ashore, is suspec-ted of entering Britain illegally and is consequently arrested. While being driven away. Chamcha, who is confused (and can you blame him?), has the misfortune of turning into a goat, compounded by the humiliation of uncontrollably spilling soft, dark pellets across the floor of the police van.

Extraordinary

The other fallen character is Gibreel, a famous Bombay actor, who takes up with an 88 year-old widow, dons a smoking jacket, charms the police when they drop round and eventually start wearing a hat to cover what he, like a modero Gabriel, discovers he has acquired: a halo.

This is an extraordinary opening. Dense with detail essential to what comes later, it can also be a little mystifying. Some readers may not get beyond it, which would be a waste since its initial inaccessibility is momeotary, a small price for an admission ticket to a masterpiece of a novel that is more ambitious than any other fiction being written loday.

Gibreelist or at least appears to be, an angel of good: an overworked coacb on the side of justice. Chamcha, with horns, booves and a buge creetion, is satanic, someone on the wrong side, a malign man-

Salman Rushdie: a little mystifying

bubble-baths and fast food. The novel is a fable, perhaps an allegory. And when Chamcha later assumes the features of Gibreel and is clearly the good guy, and Gibreel assumes some of the features of of the features of Chamcha and is clearly the bad guy (and kills himself to boot), we are tempted to infer that something is being said about the interchangeable nature of good and evil. Structure

The idea of good and evil gives the novel a structure. alternating between a view of the world as seen by Chamcha and one as seen by Gibreel or, rather, as dreamed by Gibreel, who has a tendency to fall asleep and recreate history.

Yet to talk about the book simply as a novel of good and evil distorts it. The Satanic Verses is one of the few novels that we can open at random and be surprised or recengaged by what we find even if we have read t before. There is Jahilia, a city of sand where it can never rain and in which the enemy is water. There is Avesba the epileptic empress who makes the devout prove their faith by they duly try to do and are duly drowned. There is Alleluia Cone, the ice queen who discovers ghosts at the top of Everest.

There is a chapter in which the temperature of London is increased to a tropical heat, a reconstructed version of Dickens' East End and a party featuring virtually every character of the novel culminating in Gibreel losing his sanity and becoming the angel Gabriel.

This is the imagination working at quite a pitch. Joyce has been here before, but not many others. It is writing of unparalleled power.
The Satanic Verses works on an unusual level; it is address ing the appetities of the mind, its craving for pattern, moralities, answers, right, wrong God.

....I suspect it is the most per-sonal book Salman Rushdie has written, and one in which he is trying to come to terms with the greatest question, the question of death.

THE SATANIC VERSES by Salman Rushdie/Viking £12.95

By Noel Malcolm

WHEN Kingsley Amis's fourth novel, Take a Girl Like You was published in 1960, it was hailed by one critic (as the hlurb on my Penguin copy reminds me) as "incendiary stuff ... a really formidable blaze." The hand-rubbing. schoolmasterly enthusiasm of those phrases says almost as much as the words themselves: it is the sound of a critical establishment grinning and bobbing its head as it tries to conceal its all too evident

After all, young Amis was a well-known iconoclast, wasn't he? The comic scenes in his novels depended on ridiculing figures of authority, didn't they? His writing was unbearably explicit — not about sex (that would have been bearable) but about lechery. And yet behind it all there could be glimpsed an order of moral values which was, well, oldfashioned in its solidity, and to which even his most disreputable anti-heroes somehow submitted in the end.

Kindled Twenty-eight years later, Amis has kindled a new and rather different fire from the embers of the blaze. In Difficulties with Girls he picks up the central characters of Take a Girl Like You and sets them down in Swinging London. The year is 1967. Patrick Standish works for a firm of publishers now: a small firm, but forwardlooking in its way, with its Poets in Progress series and its editions of the latest works of Mabuse (The Mode Is The Meaning. The Ethics of Insurgency, and so on).

Jenny Standish (ncc Bunn) has also given up her teaching job. She has had one miscarriage, and has almost got over the knowledge that she will never bave any children; but the knowledge tbat marriage has not restrained; and never will restrain. Patrick's lustful attentions to other women, is still sometimes too difficult to bear. It is, after all, her love for him which has attuned her so closely to his mind that she can see through

At times, this book reminds me of one of those 18th-century novels where each new person to get into the stage-coach contributes, in turn, the story of his life. The stage-coach in this case is the block of flats where Patrick and Jenny live; the other inhabitants include an empty-headed married woman who responds with wince-making romanticism to Patrick's lust, and a homosexual civil servant, whose relations with his live-in lover are an extreme case of difficulties with - well, with feminity anyway.

And then there is the new neighbour, Tim, foolish, deceptive and yet ineradicably innocent, whose difficulty (which occurs with girls each time at an embarrassingly crucial moment) has led him, via a Harley Street psychiatrist. to believe that he must be homosexual. There is, then, a gallery of misfits here sufficient to stand alongside the cast-list of earlier comic masterpieces such as Take a Girl Like You. But the nature of the comedy has chan-

In one sense, the mood is more bitter now: much of the misogyny expressed by Patrick and his male friends remains uncontradicted by events, and the moral shallowness of Patrick's character is all the more painfully obvious, now that Mr Amis has perfected his technique of presenting sballow characters, so to speak, in depth.

Comedy But at the same time the comedy has become gentler too. Those touches of Sixties grotesquerie which young Amis would have ridiculed mercilessly are now depicted by old Amis with almost loving fascination - the sort of love. at any rate, which Flaubert came to feel for buman stupidity. And the growth in moral stature of Jenny's character as the book progresses blossoms, almost without our noticing it, into a generous reaffirmation of human good-

A star in the age of the paparazzi

By John Russell Taylor

ONCE asked Noel Coward about the stage play he had allegedly written based on Star Quality, Well, he said, he had completed it and then decided it was not interesting enough to

The trouble was that it was exclusively about the trials and tribulations of show business, and while everyone inside show business thought everything that happened to them was of absorbing interest, no one out-side gave a damn about bow a show got on the road, provided

Faced with a book about an actor the size of Melvyn Bragg's new biography of Richard Burton, it is difficult to dismiss Coward's strictures. Has there ever been an actor to whom nothing happened that was not showbiz, who was yet interesting enough to sustain such detailed personal consideration?

Fans of Mommy Dearest and My Mother's Keeper would probably agree that they come within the Coward guidelines. And autobiographies are different; since they ultimately depend more on the talent of the writer to make what happened to him interest-ing than on the inherent interest of whatever it was.

Advantage Here, at least, Rich has an advantage: the very extensive use it makes of Burton's own unpublished notebooks. We knew already that Burton had ambitions as a writer, culled, perhaps, from early contacts with Dylan Thomas. (Thomas, certainly, seems to be the stron-gest influence on pieces publi-shed during Burton's lifetime). And whenever be got fed up with the acting game, or some-how disillusioned, Burton would regularly think he might become a writer instead.

So it is not surprising that we catch a glimpse of him keeping a rather ordinary 14-year-old schoolboy's diary, shortly before the start of his relationship with Philip Burton, the "spotless bachelor" ("improunthinkable. telegraphs Bragg) who was to become his sponsor, mentor. and surrogate father, and hand on his name. From 1966 onwards, he kept intermittently untebook diaries-cum-commonplace books which had amounted by the time of his death to 350,000 words.

These would seem to have gathered up his passing com-ments on books he was reading and events of the day, mostly unexceptional (heisshocked hy Stephen Ward's trial, wry Stephen Ward's trial, wry about Teddy Kennedy's misfortunes, and so on); they are really interesting only on three things: his professional selfanalysis. his relations with Elizabeth Taylor (the notebooks begin around The Taming of the Shrew), and the occasional critical comment occasional critical comment about fellow actors. One gets the impression that Bragg has salvaged everything (and per-haps rather more than everything) worth keeping.

So, then, why this hook? Not just, I think, because Burton had his name in lights throughout the world, for so have many others not deemed suitable for this hefty memorializing. Was he, finally, the star who came in from the cold, giving up brilliant prospects in the theatre for the creature com-forts of a place in the Holly-wood sun? Or was he, rather, the star who never (quite) was? Whatever may be thought of his acting skills on stage or film. the fact remains unarguable that his real fame stems from his relationship with Elizabeth Taylor, begun when, after a not particularly distinguished career in films, he was second choice to play Antony to her Cleopatra. From then on the world was agog — but about the pair of them rather than him in particular, even after they had divorced, remarried, redivorced, and gone through further spouse or two apiece.

He always liked to say that she was the better actor. Whether he really meant it or not, as far as the screen is concerned he was probably right.

The many faces of Richard Burton: whatever may be thought of his acting skills, the fact remains that his real fame stems from his relationship with Elizabeth Taylor

She was certainly the more convincing moviestar. But then she had been a star in the era of Louella and Hedda, when peo-ple were interested in your private life because of what you did on the screen. He became a star in the age of the paparazzi when the tail of private life tended to wag the dog of career.
Too often he just walked through his role with evident

But one wonders whether a more immediate comparison would not be with John Neville: Neville, too, was touted as the next great actor. but shortly disappeared to reemerge in Canada as a respected director and manager. Who knows what would have happened to Burton if he had not shifted to the cinema when he did? The fantasy of the motives great career one might have had is always more comfortable than the hard slog of actually trying to live it out. And Burton

I had gone to Sardinia to see some shooting on Boom. As chance would have it, I was lirst introduced to Elizabeth Taylor. Her response was brief and to the point: 10 words, mostly choice expletives, and off she swept. Moments later, it was Burton's turn. He fixed me with his hasilisk eye. "You're the one who said I was oatish." 'Doesn't sound like my style.' I said, feverishly trying to recall what I had said about The Tanting of the Shrew, "Cloddish, then, No? Well, I'll remember, Never forget a review, Never," He turned on his heel and stalked out. But then at the door he turned, his features suffused with a schoolboy grin. "Well anyway." he announced. "it's already taken eight million domestic." RICH, The Life of Richard Burton by Melvyn Bragg (Hodder & Stoughton, £15).

James Lees-Milne chooses his favourite diaries

Confessions of a diary-reading author

By James Lees-Mune

UNLIKE a biography, a diary cannot tell the complete or unbiased story of a life. At best it is a collection of jottings. It has no beginning, little sequence and no end. The author's carly and usually last years are lacking.

Generally speaking, diaries can be divided into chronicles of public events, travel, and private actions and reflections. The first sort, kept by Thomas Creevey and Richard Crossman, being exclusively political, have no appeal for me. The second concern me only if I am visiting or writing about the places they describe. The third invariably fascinate

Now why on earth do people keep diaries? No doubt the majority hope that one day they may be published. I don't see anything reprehensible in this harmless desire. Nor do I believe that the majority of diarists write for their own eyes exclusively. It is true, so the diary expert Simon Brett says, that all are to some degree selfconscious. He instances that strutting, rutting, cock-robin of a man, Samuel Pepys, who. although he wrote in shorthand, often lapsed coyly into a gruesome kind of Esperanto when recording his sexual exploits:

Going to bed she undressed me, and there I did give her good advice and baso la, ella weeping still; and yo did take ber, the first time in my life, sobra mi genu and did poner mu mano sub her jupes and toca su thing

Exhibitionist

Some diarists are frankly exhibitionist. Some treat their diary as a Father Confessor, seeking absolution from sin and spiritual guidance; others as the never-complaining, allunderstanding friend, the repository of confidence, and comforter in times of emotional

Fanny Burney addressed hers to "Nobody" because "Nobody" would not repeat ber confidences. Elizabeth Barrett had from the start grave misgivings: "How could I write a diary without throwing upon paper my thoughts?" How indeed?" "And then how could I bear to look on them after

neut and splendid writing. they were written?" She should have known better than to think of doing such a rash Byron was far less naive. He regarded his diary as a relief to his feelings. "When I am tired ... out come this, and down goes everything. But I can't read it over and God knows what contradictions it may contain." He was far astuter than E. Barrett: "If I am sincere with myself. (but I fear one lies more to oneself than to anyone else, every page should confute, refute, and utterly abjure its predecessor" — which confirms the fact that a diarist can draw only a one-dimensional portrait of himself. Unlike the biographer he is inconsistent and swayed by every wind that

What matters most is that a diary should not be boring. To be unboring the writer should, I suggest, observe certain rules. He should make his entries daily so that they be immediate, not retrospective. He should not correct or polish them, for that leads to loss of spontaneity. Let him dash down the words, heedless of grammar and repetitions.

Admittedly when publication dawns he will be tempted, and should resist as far as possible, to omitor modify shameful recordings. The moment a diarist laments that he is losing the regular daily habit, beware. He is becoming a bore. Sir Walter Scott admitted on Feb 1, 1828 that he was "fishing for the lost recollections of the days since the 21 January." Henceforth his journals become unreadable. The last rule is, never show your diary in manuscript to a living soul.

Candour is the greatest quality of a good diarist. Canhe be truly honest? It is very difficult. The temptation to be scrupulous about thoughts and events concerning oneself, however unscrupulous one may be in recounting those of others, is ever present. Chips Channonasked: "What is more dull than a discreet diary? One might just as well have a discreet soul." He at least could not be upbraided for that. The readability of a diary is not governed by the niceness or nastiness of its author. Some of the best diarists have been blatant cads; some show-offs; some whiners; some frankly disagreeable, like the 5th Viscount Torrington who was always grumbling, carping and criticising other people's houses. He must bave been consumed with envy. Some find their diary the only means of revenge upon life, like poor homosexual in pre-Wolfenden days. A concern commonly shared by diarists is death. Even Pepys and Noel Coward went in awe of it. In consequence nearly all diaries are sad. This is not perhaps surprising since diarists are an introspective lot. One has merely to think of Benjamin R. Haydon pathetically striving to maintain his selfconfidence. His end was suicide as was Virginia Woolf's - probably for the same reason. It always surprises me how most diarists have neglected to explain ordinary mundane things like, say, the speed at which news travelled before trains and telegraphs were invented, and the relative values of money. For whereas a Georgian squire might pay his groom £5 a year he would toss a guinea to a ragged youth who opened a gate for him out hunting. It is well to bear in mind the simple details which posterity likes to learn about. What was the first thing their forebears did on rising? Relieve them-selves? Into what? Did the wellto-do have to walk in winter darkness and cold to a garden privy? With a rush light? Ano was paper, or wool, or dried grass provided? Did they strip and wash the whole body with soap (where indeed did the soap come from?), or allow a natural grease to accumulate? How disagreeably did they smell? How often, if at all, were their outer garments cleaned? Arbitrary

A choice of favourite diaries

must be arbitrary. But for sheer wit, ludicrous incident, pen-etrating assessment of people and splendid writing I plum for those of Byron, Virginia Woolf and Harold Nicolson. Byron, very introvert, suffered acutely from "angst." One is not for a moment taken in by his delicious cynicism, self-disparagement and contempt for "poesie", which he called it, as beneath a nobleman's dignity. Who would write, who had anything better to do?" he asked, tongue in cheek. I find bis apohthegms irresistible. "When one extracts from life infancy (which is vegetation) sleep, eating and swilling — buttoning and unbuttoning how much remains of downright existence? The summer of a dormouse."

Virginia Woolf's diaries, like her novels, may be caviar to the general. Whn cares if they don't adhere strictly to the truth?

The five volumes constitute one of the great masterprices of 20th-century literature. Her outlook on life is intensely original. She is an obsessive writer, drilled, disciplined. She sees the most ordinary sight, an old woman crossing a street, and thinks: "How do I describe that in words?" And she does it with magic. Malicious, ruthless, cruel, self-centred, her diaries are poetical effusions from beginning to end.

Harold Nicolson's are on the contrary pithy and devoid of all meanness. They express humanity and goodness. Their style is urbane, idiosyncratic, Always the adept turn of phrase. Never for an instant boring. They chronicle parliamentary, literary and social happenings with the keenest wit. They excel the memoirs of Saint-Simon and the journals of the Goncourt hrothers, being devoid of the mischievous gossip of the first and the intellectual odium of the second.

So much for these astringent and stirring diaries. My top lavourites however are those about, well -- nothing much. I admit that Parson Woodforde's nothingness is too trite and monotonous. But the nothingness of Dorothy Wordsworth Francis Kilvert and Denton Welch. three unimportant individuals in our country's history, enthral me.

The three are passionate observers of nature, country ways, places and customs. Dorothy's landscape is stark and grey. Fragile and put upon, she slaved for the two most selfish poets of genius it is possible to imagine, her brother William and Coleridge, anticipating and satisfying their material and intellectual needs.

The Rev Francis Kilvert was not a tragic figure. His diaries are chiefly concerned with the care of his parishioners and a deep love of the Welsh mountains, flowers, birds and children, especially little girls. The descriptions of his treks for miles on foot in all seasons are intensely evocative. He was simple, credulous and an upholder of all rural traditions

Italy frees West Germans for qualifiers

MUNICH, West Germany, Oct (Reuter): 'Exiles' Lothar Matthacus, Andreas Brehme and Rudi Voeller have been freed by their Italian clubs for West Germany's World Cup soccer qualifier agaiost the Netherlaods, team manager Franz Beckenbauer told a news conference yesterday.

He included them in his preliminary squad for the match in Munich on October 19 along with newcomers Michael Schulz and goalkceper Andreas Koepke.

Schulz was one of six members of West Germany's Olympic bronze medal team named in the 19-man squad. The others were Holger Facb, Thomas Haessler Juergen Klinsmann, Frank Mill and Karlheinz Riedle.

The full squad: Goal - Bodo Illgner, Andreas

Defence — Andreas Brehme. Guido Buchwald, Holger Fach, Matthias Herget, Jurgen Kohler, Stefan Reuter, Michael Schulz. Midfield - Thomas Haessler, Guenter Hermann, Lothar Matthacus, Wolfgang Rolff, Olaf

El Buitre' swoops as Real sail through

LONDON, Oct 7, (Reuter): Spanish international striker Emilio Butragueno lived up to his reputation as one of Europe's deadliest strikers on Wednesday night when he guided Real Madrid comfortably through to the second round of the. European Cup with the only goal of their 1-0 victory over Moss in Butragueno, dubbed The Vulture in Spain for his predatory scoring instincts, struck six minutes before the interval as the Spaniards, cushioned by a 3-0 advantage from the first leg in Madrid, strolled to a 4-0 aggregate victory on a night of high scoring in 49 ties all over Europe.

Swagger Real were joined in the second round by 1986 Champions Cup winners Steaua Bucharest and 1987 winners Porto - but neither progressed with the swagger of potential champions this time.

Steaua were held 2-2 at home by Sparta Prague, but went through 7-3 on aggregate thanks to their 5-1 win in Czechoslovakia in the first leg, and Porto squeezed though 3-2 on aggregate after losing 2-0 in Finland to HJK Helsinki Glasgow Celtic, the 1967 winners, swept through with a 4-1 aggregate victory over Honved Budapest, Billy Stark, Andy Walker, Frank McAvennie and Mark McGhee scoring the goals which overwhelmed the Hungarians 4-0 in the second leg.

The high-scoring was led hy former West German champions Bayern Munich. Leading 3-1 from the first leg, they overwhelmed Legia Warsaw 7-3 in Poland in a UEFA tie claim a 10-4 aggregate win. In the absence of holders PSV Eindhoven of the Netherlands, who were given a bye to the second round, Real's tie was the focal point of attention as they began their bid for a record seventh Champions' Cup win.

After their untypically sluggish start to the season, Real began to show signs of recapturing their form last weekend with a good win over Real Oviedo when 'El Buitre' scored twice and his understanding with Mexican Hugo Sanchez and West German midfielder Bernd Schuster continued to blossom in Norway as they secured their place in the draw for the second round.

Gheorge Hagi and Marius Lacatus scored for the Romanian champions Steaua against Sparta Prague after Bilek had opened the scoring. Bilek also equalised for Sparta with two minutes to spare.

Red Star Belgrade, 3-0 victors over Ireland's Dundalk with goals from Satanadzovic, Mrkela and Savicevic, swept through with an 8-0 aggregate win to be joined by Galatasarary of Turkey and Nentori Tirana of Albania.

Repeated

The Turkish ebampions, 2-1 down from the first leg, beat Rapid Vienna 2-0, a feat repeated by the Albanians against Hamrun Spartans of Maita.

Swedisb champions Gnthenburg, tipped by some as a possible threat to the established eiants, crushed Pezoporikos of Cyprus 5-1 for a 7-2 aggregate passage with goals from Roland Nilsson and Lars Zetterlund in the opening seven minutes and later strikes by Tommy Holmgren and Dan Froberg (2).
In the Cup Winners' Cup, Kharkov followed the Soviet Union's recent success at the Olympics by beating Yugoslavia's Borac Banjaluka 4-0 for an aggregate 4-2 win. Barcelona, 2-0 up from the first leg of their tie against lceland's Fram Reykjavik, followed Kharkov into the second round with a resounding 5-0 win which saw England striker Gary Lineker, recovered from hepatitis, score his first goal of the season. Lineker opened the scoring after nine minutes and Barcelona's other goals followed from Aitor Beguiristain (2). Roberto Fernandez and Jose Bakero.

The UEFA Cup was dominated by events in Poland where Bayern Munich enjoyed an exceptional goal spree against Legia Warsaw, and Glasgow Rangers powered to a tremendous victory over Katowice. Defender Norbert Nachtweih set Bayern on their way with a tremendous 30-metre drive for the opening goal after 20 minutes and further goals followed from Johnny Ekstrom (2), Klaus Augenthaler, Armin Eck and Erwin Wegman (2).

Further Injury-hit Rangers fell a goal behind early on to a free kick by Jan Furtok but stormed back with two headed goals by England defender Terry But-

Miroslav Kuhisztal pulled the Polish team back into the game in the second balf but further goals by Iain Durrant and Ian Ferguson ended their hopes as Rangers romped home. Ajax Amsterdam, reeling with internal problems after their poor start to the Dutch League season, crashed out of the UEFA Cup, beaten 6-3 on aggregate by Sporting Lisbon.

The Portuguese team followed their 4-2 win in the first leg with a comfortable 2-1 victory in Amsterdam, Silas and Maside scoring for Sporting and Marc Verkuijl replying for haples Ajax. Napoli were held to a 1-1 draw last night away to Paok Salonika but managed to reach the 2nd round on a 2-1 aggregate having won the first leg 1-0.

In a rough, hard-fought game played before 45,000 fans at Salonica's Toumba stadium. Napoli's Brazilian centerforward Careca shot the ball into Paok's net in the 17th minute after a right cross from the Italian team's star Argentine forward Diego Maradona.

The northern Greek team equalised in the 63rd with a header from striker Giorgos Skarados after a corner shot.

In a very physical match, the Napolitean team was hard pressed by an aggressive Greek offense. Paok, which spoiled several good scoring opportunities, was unable to penetrate Napoli's tight and well organised

The Greek team also failed to further take advantage of a total of 20 corner shots against nine for Napoli. Italian players trying a themselves on top of the English to execute the corners were pel First Division today. ted by objects thrown by rowdy first round last night. Milan advanced into the second round of the most prestigious European tournament for clubs on a 7-2 aggregate score as it had won the away first-leg 2-

And in Cremona, Sampdoria of Genou scored one goal in each half to down Sweden's Norrkoping 2-(1 last night and gain a second-round herth in the European Cup Winners' Cup tournament.

The Italian team, which had lost 1-2 the first-leg first-round match in Sweden, advanced on a 3-2 aggregate score through its clearcut win in the return-match in this north Italian city, near

Australians plod to 175 for three

LAHORE, Pakistan, Oct 7. (Reuter): Australia opted for safety rather than spectacle today, grinding to 175 for three on the first day of the decisive third Test against Pakistan.

Captain Allan Border celebrated his 97th Test appearance, making him Australia's most capped player, with an unbeaten 54.

Otherwise it was slow cricket as accurate Pakistani bowling kept the touring batsmen tied down. Opener Geoff Marsh hit a dour 64, but it took him 296 minutes.

Australia won the toss and set ahout the task of levelling the three-Test series with grim determination. Marsh and David Boon plodded cautiously to 69 at lunch on an easy-paced wicket. Tempted

The opening partnership was finally broken in mid-afternoon when Australia were 87. Boon was tempted to square cut a rising ball outside the off stump from Sulim Jaffer, but failed to get hold of it and Shoaih Mohammad caught him at point

Americans Carl Lewis, Florence Griffith Joyner, Roger Kingdom and Jackie Joyner-Kersee, Soviets Sergei Bubka and Gennadiy Avdeenko and Jamaican Grace Jackson head a star-studded cast of Olympic medallists who will bring the 1988 track and field season to a close here A lotal of 77 athletes from 23 countries who won 56 medals between them at the Olympic Games which ended in Seoul on Sunday, compete in the Toshiba Super International Meet 88, at the National Stadium, built for the first Olympics in Asia in 1964. Sixteen gold medallists as well as 130 local athletes are expected to compete.

Record

The stadium will be the venue for the Third World Championships in three years, and officials say tomorrow's meet will give them useful experience in run-. ning a major event. But one man not running tomorrow, although he could be back on the track hy 1991, is Canadian Ben Johnson, who lost his Olympic 100 metres title and world record of 9.79 seconds when he was positively tested for steroids in Seoul.

Ironically, Johnson's season began to go wrong when he pulled a hamstring in a meet in Tokyo in May. He was originally scheduled to race gainst Lewis tomorrow in what would have been a humper pay-day for both Now Lewis, who was awarded was not satisfied with holding just the 100 metres and 200 metres world records.

"I think I can go faster in both the 100 and 200," she said, "and I plan to spend a year learning how to run the 400 metres properly and go for the world record in that.'

All four men who medalled in the bigh jump — Avdeenko, American Hollis Conway, and joint bronze medallists Rudolf Povarnitsyn of the Soviet Union and Patrik Sjoberg of Sweden, do battle again.

TORONTO, Oct 7. (Reuter): A pharmaceutical company said yesterday it sold Ben Johnson's personal physician anabolic steroids of the kind that cost the Canadian sprinter an Olympic gold medal last week.

Dr George Mario (Jamie) Astaphan, who has denied giving the sprinter stanozolol, bought the nuscle-building substance from Sterling Drug Lid, a com-pany spokesman said. Confirmed

"When this issue came forward, we reviewed our records and can confirm we sold stanozolol to Dr Astaphan," Sterling spokesman Joe Kieler told Reuters in an interview.

Stanozolol, banned by the International Olympic Committee, was found in Johnson's urine after his record-breaking 100 metres win to the Seoul Olympics. His time was stricken from the record books and his gold medal was withdrawn.

Astaphan has given conflicting versions about his use and possession of steroids.
